[This section, which is heavily indebted to J W Draper's Eighteenth Century English Aesthetics, 1931, has been revised by Professor R S Crane (and his assistants) and by Dr F T Wood. It is primarily a bibliography of literary theory, though other forms of criticism have not been altogether excluded. The following omissions are to be noted: (1) Shakespearian criticism (for which see under Shakespeare, vol 1, pp 539-608 above), (2) dramatic criticism (see pp 397-402 below), (3) periodical criticism (partially supplied by Draper), (4) prosody (see vol 1, pp 15-7 above), (5) the theory of translation (see p 753 below)]

(1) PUBLISHERS' CATALOGUES

(a) Advertisement Lists

[The practice of printing lists of books for sale by a publisher at the end of a book, either on the unused remnant of a sheet, or on separate leaves inserted, appears to have originated about 1646 From this time onwards to the end of our period it becomes an increasingly common practice, and much information may be gained from the study of such lists They are very numerous and no attempt can be made to list them here

More elaborate separate lists were issued by publishers such as Bassett, Walthoe or Worrall, who all specialised in Law Books, and Kirkman, Mears and Feales, who were interested in the sale of plays Considerable catalogues of the books which they published were issued together with those of books imported by Becket and De Hondt in the 1760's, and separately by Cadell in the 1770's and 1780's, but both these series were probably designed to encourage the retail rather than the wholesale sides of their business]

(b) Trade Sales

[On the death, retirement or bankruptcy of a bookseller it was the custom to sell his copyrights, his shares in joint publications and his unbound stock in quires at an auction to which only members of the trade were invited Early examples of these in the BM are those in the List of English Book Sales under the dates 24 Feb 1679 (Moses Pitt and the Oxford University Press), 12 Jan 1687, 7 and 28 Sept 1691, 4 Jan 1692, 17 Feb 1692 There are others in the private collection of J F Fulton Longmans, Green & Co have a collection of such catalogues extending from 1704 to 1768, which originally belonged to Thomas Osborne, the father-in-law of the first Longman This set has been described by W H Peet in N & Q 19 April 1890, p 301 Another collection is in the possession of Rivington, and Hodgson of Chancery Lane have a set from 1806 onwards The first page of the catalogue of the sale of John Bell's quire stock is reproduced in Stanley Morison's work on Bell The sets of catalogues enumerated above are for the most part priced, and show, besides the holdings of copyright of various publishers, the values that publishers set on the copyrights of all the most important works of the early 18th century A certain amount of information about these trade sales may also be found in both John Nichols's works, in Lackington's Memoirs and in an article by Joseph Shaylor in the Fortnightly Rev Dec 1907]

(2) THE RETAIL TRADE

(a) Catalogues of Second-hand Books

[The first catalogue advertising a bookseller's retail stock would appear to be that which Henry Featherstone issued in 1628 of the book he had recently bought in Italy, but the issue of catalogues of second-hand or rare books other than those imported from abroad does not seem to have started before the last two decades of the 17th century In the list given below of the more important firms which issued catalogues, the terminal dates are those of catalogues which have actually been seen It is probable that the firms in question issued at least one catalogue a year, and in some years some of them issued as many as four or five, but the series in the BM are very fragmentary, and no attempt at a comprehensive list has been made since that of Richard Gough in 1794, so that these dates should not be regarded as definitive, nor does it follow that catalogues were issued for every year within the period given]

(3) PROVINCIAL BOOKSELLERS

[The earliest provincial catalogues were those of the auction sales held at fairs and markets by itinerant booksellers. On this subject see John Dunton, The Dublin Scuffle, Edward Marston, Sketches of Some Booksellers of the Time of Dr Johnson, and W J. Couper, The Millers of Haddington, Dunbar and Dunfermline. A brief note of the earliest extant catalogues of such sales in each town is given below, it does not include the local sale of private libraries]
 Tunbridge Wells [E Millington?] 8 Aug 1684
 Stourbridge Fair E Millington 8 Sept 1684 [and annually to after 1694]
 St Edmondsbury Fair E Millington 23 Sept 1689
 Edinburgh [Anonymous] 9 July 1690
 Abingdon E Millington 9 May 1692
 Newcastle John Story 28 July 1692
 Manchester [Anonymous] 4 Oct 1692
 York Nevill Simmons of Sheffield 16 Oct 1717
 Sidbury Michael Johnson of Lichfield [father of Dr Johnson] 21 March 1718

(4) THE IMPORTATION OF BOOKS

[The most important importer of both rare and new foreign books between 1660 and 1690 was Robert Scott, who issued three catalogues, all with the title Catalogus librorum ex varius Europae partibus advectorum, in 1664, 1674 and 1687. He sold the goodwill of his business to Adiel Mill, and the bulk of his stock was sold at auction by Benjamin Walford on 23 Feb 1688. See also The Case of Moses Pitt at the end of The Cry of the Oppressed, 1691, and Roger North's Life of Dr John North in North's Lives, 1744, pp 240 ff. During the decade 1680-90 the number of firms engaged in the importation of foreign books increased considerably, and a number of auction sales of such miscellaneous collections are recorded in the BM Handlist of Sales. At the beginning of the 18th century P Varenne in Exeter Exchange (c 1703-1716?) auctioned a large number of collections which he had himself imported. In the 1720's and 1730's Nicholas Prevost and other booksellers were accustomed to advertise their recent importations on the last sheet of several of the weekly papers as The Universal Spectator and Weekly Journal, 1728-46. In 1735 William Innys and Richard Manby issued an extensive Catalogus Librorum Domi Forisq; impressorum quibus Bibliopolium suum adauxere. From 1761 until at least 1773 T Becket and P A De Hondt in the Strand issued an annual Catalogue of Books Imported, and the Typographical Society in St James Street issued a numbered series of twelve catalogues of imported books in 1773-4. In 1790 Pice, Rivington & Co of Oxford issued A Select Catalogue of German Books Imported.

Besides the normal importation of foreign books, five important libraries were imported en bloc and sold at auction. Joannes Riolan by Martin and Allestree in 1655, Esprit Flecher by Woodman and Lyon in 1726, Maffei Pinelli by Samuel Paterson in 1789, Paris de Meyzieux by James Edwards in 1791, and the Lamoignon Library by Thomas Payne in 1793.]

O CIRCULATING LIBRARIES

[Circulating libraries were first started in Great Britain by Allan Ramsay at Edinburgh in 1726: no catalogue of this venture has been recorded, but see Robert Wodrow, Analecta, vol III, 1843, p 515.]

Descriptions of circulating libraries may frequently be found in the Guides to watering places, such as Bath, Brighton, Margate, Weymouth, etc., which were usually issued by the proprietors of the libraries.]

[Fancourt, Samuel] The Gentlemen and Ladies Growing and Circulating Library Consisting at present of many thousand volumes. The Universal Library in Crane-Court, Fleet-street. 2 vols [1744-6] (issued in pts), 2 vols 1748. [Fancourt is generally credited with being the first to organise a commercial circulating library in London. The above is certainly the earliest known catalogue of such an organisation.]

William Bathoe (bookseller) A New Catalogue of the Curious and Valuable Collection of Books (both English and French) which are lent to be read at the Original Circulating Library (being the first of its kind in London) at the Blue Bible near Exeter Exchange in the Strand [c 1756] [This was certainly in existence in 1743, so that the claim made on the title-page may be well founded. It later passed into the possession of John Bell.]

William Gray (bookseller) A Catalogue of Books to be Lent. Edinburgh, 1772.

J. Sibbald & Co (booksellers) A New Catalogue of the Edinburgh Circulating Library consisting of 20,000 volumes. Edinburgh, [c 1780] [J Sibbald & Co succeeded Mr and Mrs Yair, who had taken over the original circulating library from Allan Ramsay.]

A Catalogue of Books in the Public Library at Dunse [Berwickshire], 1780. [Contains the Laws and Regulations of the Library. This is the earliest catalogue noted of a private or non-commercial book society. They were probably started at much earlier dates, for one at Kelso started in 1750 see Diary of George Ridpath, Publications. Scottish Hist Soc ser 3, II, Edinburgh, 1922.]

A. POLITICAL HISTORY

(1) GENERAL AND MISCELLANEOUS 1660-1714

(a) Sources

[Burnet is useful for the whole period, Luttrell from 1678 onwards. There are no Foreign, Spanish, or Venetian Calendars, but works like Dalrymple's help to fill the gap for certain periods. For William III the Shrewsbury correspondence, the Vernon letters and the Downshire MSS give the Whig point of view. The Finch MSS only supply the Tory counterpart until 1690. For Anne the Harley papers with Bolingbroke's letters contain the correspondence of the Tory leaders—the Whig view has to be sought in Marlborough (listed p 163 below). For mere political annals Boyer is excellent. For further titles see Bibliography of British History, Stuart Period, 1603-1714, ed G Davies, Oxford, 1928.]

(e) Biographies, Memoirs, Family Correspondence and Collected Works, 1760–1800

[The first decade of George III is perforce better represented in the general section 1714–1800 than here—in the entries under Chatham, Grenville or Russell For 1770–82 the correspondence of George III is essential, and for the opposition, the lives of Chatham, Burke, C J Fox and Shelburne—the last being indispensable for the treaty of Versailles After 1784 the lives of Pitt overshadow other material here]

(3) FOREIGN RELATIONS (1660-1800)

[For the period 1660-1714 Klopp is the best single work, especially after about 1678. After 1783 the Cambridge History is admirable. To bridge the gap there are several monographs by Ward, Chance, Lodge, and others, but no continuous narrative. Recourse should be had to general histories, as Lecky. For treaties see Myers.]

2. THE POETRY

I RECENT CRITICISM SURVEYS AND SPECIAL STUDIES

[For 17th and 18th century criticism the section Literary Theory (pp 9-31 above) can be consulted. An attempt has also been made not to duplicate unnecessarily either studies of foreign and medieval influences (see pp 81-73 and 73-81 above) or the general works (including bibliographies of poetry) already listed (pp 3-9) in the Introduction to this vol.]

II MISCELLANIES, ANTHOLOGIES
AND COLLECTIONS OF POETRY(1) POETICAL MISCELLANIES, SONG BOOKS, AND VERSE COLLECTIONS OF MULTIPLE AUTHORSHIP

[This bibliography purposely excludes—with a few important exceptions—periodicals, chap-books, garlands, almanacs and calendars, books of riddles, etc in rhyme, jest-books containing only stray epigrams, 18th century song-books in folio by single composers, programmes, hymn-books, academical collections with less than three poems in English, laudatory poems prefixed to an author's works, and books purporting to have been written by one man. Otherwise it comprises all the compiler has been able to locate of the extant collections of verse (or verse and prose) containing the work of three or more hands. The great majority have been examined in the British Museum or the Bodleian, and only when a book has not been found in either place, the location of the cited copy is given in round brackets immediately following the year of publication (reference to a bookseller being accompanied by the date of the catalogue quoting the book). The main plan of this section is chronological, but each year's books are arranged alphabetically according to their titles. For particulars of many of the books not in the above-mentioned libraries the compiler is indebted to the various librarians, booksellers, and private owners concerned, especially to Mr J F R Stainer for the loan of the annotated catalogues of his father's collection, to Mr W N H Harding of Chicago, whose library of 18th century song-books since his purchase of the Stainer Collection is probably the largest in private hands, and, among other American correspondents, to Doctors R G Noyes, A E Case, C L Day and E Murre.]

No bibliography of this subject and period had been published when the following lists were first set up in type, though a partial survey—A Short-Title List of the Poetical Collections of the XVIIth Century—was included in N Ault's Seventeenth Century Lyrics, 1928. Two compilations, each covering a small section of the field, have since been published or announced, namely, A Bibliography of English Poetical Miscellanies 1521–1750, by A E Case, and English Song-Books, 1651–1702. A Bibliography [limited to books containing music], by C L Day and E Murre.]

(2) LATER ANTHOLOGIES AND MISCELLANEOUS SELECTIONS

[Selections from the verse of this period are included in most anthologies. This list is therefore limited to those, published since 1800, which either are specifically concerned with poetry written between 1660 and 1800, or have devoted to it an unusually large proportion of space. The arrangement of this section is chronological—except that an author's later works are grouped together under the date of his first publication.]

(1) BIBLIOGRAPHY

[There is no full bibliography of Dryden, though one is now (1939) in preparation by Mr Hugh Macdonald The Check-List of Dryden's Plays, Bibliographer (New York), I,
1902, is superseded by the list in A Nicoll's Restoration Drama, Cambridge, 1923 For the poems the bibliographical data in the edn
by G R Noyes, Boston, 1909, are useful Much information is contained in the Catalogue of an Exhibition of First and Other Editions of the Works of John Dryden (1631-1700), Grolier Club (New York), 1900, and in the Catalogue of the Ashley Library, vol II, 1922, and A Dryden Library, 1931, both by
T. J Wise, whose bibliographical statements however must be accepted with caution The sale-catalogue of Mr G. Thorn-Drury's library, Sotheby, 1931-2, is very useful, but the most valuable contribution to Dryden bibliography is P J Dobell's John Dryden, Bibliographical Memoranda, 1922.]

(c) The Principal Works of Dramatic Criticism (1660–1800)

[It has not been possible to include periodical criticism here, other than specifically theatrical periodicals, and Shakespearean criticism is also omitted since it is listed above, vol 1, pp 591–4. The literature of the Collier controversy has been allotted a separate section below, pp 400–2, and the pamphlets attacking John Home's Douglas (1757) are listed under Home, p 470 below, but no attempt has been made to include the later denunciations of the drama. These lists may be supplemented by R W Babcock, A Preliminary Bibliography of Eighteenth-Century Criticism of Shakespeare, Stud Phil, Ex Ser 1, 1929 (which includes many works only incidentally connected with Shakespeare), and J W Draper, Eighteenth-Century English Aesthetics: A Bibliography, Heidelberg, 1931 (pt 4 of which is concerned with Literature and Drama). And C H Gray, Theatrical Criticism in London to 1795, New York, 1931, covers the periodicals with admirable minuteness. Modern rpts of the works by Butler, Flecknoe, Howard, Shadwell, Rymer, Dennis, Congreve, Farquhar, Purney, Steele, Hume, will be found in the main sections above and below devoted to these writers.]

VIII MINOR DRAMA, 1750-1800

[This section is restricted to writers, with one or two exceptions, who were born between 1715 and 1765. Italicised abbreviations have been employed for the principal contemporary collections of plays (e.g. Bell, Inchbald's Farces, Acting Drama, etc.), the full titles will be found on pp 392-3 above. (The appearance of plays in other collections has not normally been noted.) The note '(Larpent MS)' is to be understood to mean that the MS submitted to the licensor for the original (English) production is now in the Larpent Collection at the Huntington Lib., California. A key to the other abbreviations used (C, C O, T, CG, DL, etc.) will be found on p 410 above. No attempt has been made to record edns of the songs and music of comic operas, pantomimes, etc. except in cases where the whole play has not been ptd. Acted plays have been arranged in the chronological order of production—not as elsewhere in that of publication.]

DANIEL DEFOE (1660-1731)

(1) BIBLIOGRAPHY

[The first significant list of Defoe's works, appended by George Chalmers to his revised Life of Daniel Defoe, pbd separately in 1790, and with the Stockdale Robinson Crusoe of the same year, contains about 99 genuine and dubious items. But from evidence given by Defoe in his extant letters and memoranda, from the evidence furnished by some of the pamphlets laid at his door by his contemporaries and from stylistic qualities which point indisputably to Defoe's authorship, Chalmers's list was augmented to upwards of 370 titles by W P Trent, CHEL vol ix, 1913. Intervening, among others, are the important bibliographies of Walter Wilson (1830), assigning 210 books and pamphlets to Defoe, of William Hazlitt (1840), suggesting 183 certain titles, and 52 attributed works, of William Lee (1869), with 254 titles, and of Thomas Wright (1894, revised and enlarged, 1931), with 254 and 258 titles, respectively. Following these, come the articles of Trent, in The Nation (see below), and the list of Paul Dottin (1924, English trans, 1929) which, with the additions made by A W Secord, C E Burch, and others, increase the total number of books, pamphlets, and periodical contributions accredited to Defoe to over 400. Most of the lists compiled by these scholars are appended to their biographies, or editions, which may be found under Sections (2) and (6) below.

The compiler gratefully acknowledges his indebtedness to Professor Trent for kind advice and assistance throughout the preparation of this bibliography.]
